Don't Dress For Dinner

Don't Dress For Dinner is a classic French farce, which ran in London for seven years with Simon Cadell and Sue Pollard in the leading roles.

From curtain up, the action shifts into top gear and it never slows. In the true tradition of French farce, illicit liaisons become entangled, attempts to cover them up become ever more improbable and the laughs come at a pace that scarcely leaves you time to catch your breath.

Only the undisputed master of this art, Marc Camelotti (famous also for his earlier hit 'Boeing, Boeing'), could devise an evening of such hilarious nonsense and weave it into a story that somehow still manages to maintain a feint whiff of credulity - and, of course, finally resolves itself in an outcome that satisfies everyone involved!

Forget the trials and tribulations of the real world and allow yourself to be carried along for a couple of hours on this giant wave of fun!
